Butter, S. Life by Jones, 1919. rec'd Nov. 1919

B. probably a sexual pervert - in no other way can be explained his relations with Pauline - probably a passion one and accidental as he evidently had active relations with women. (V. vol. II. about Miss Dumas who was his mistress for 20 years - and there were others)
His treatment of Miss Savage, was brutal as he himself felt. Vol. II p. 349. The sonnets on her are the worst ever written about a woman, and it seems an outrage on the memory of one who was his faithful friend to publish them - and it was an shamefully bad taste on the part of her friends. I am sure Butler would have spared her; at the same time they express as has never been done before the physical repugnance aroused by some women. B. tries to excuse his nervous in those annals.

She was so kind, wooed too persistently, Wrote morning letters to me day by day,
The more she wrote, the more unmoved was I,
The more she gave the less could I repay.
Therefore I swore not that I was not loved But that, being loved, I could not love again.
I killed; but kill & love are far removed;
And though I tried to love I tried in vain.
For she was plain & lame and fat & short, Foolish & overkind. Hence it befell That though I loved her in a certain sort, Yet did I love too sorely but not well.
Ah! had she been more beautiful & kind She might have found me of another mind.

11
And now though twenty years are come & gone, That little lame lady's face is with me still;
Never a day but what, on every one, She dwells with me as dwell she ever will.
She said she wished I knew not young principles; It was not that: I knew & would have chosen Wrong, if I could, but in my chilled veins It said that if a woman woo, no man Should leave her till she have prevailed, & true, A man will yield for pity if he can,
But if the flesh rebels what can he do?
I could not; hence I gave my whole life long The wrong; I did in that I did no wrong.

He wrote also "Death" bound me to her when he set me free It is an extraordinary episode, in some ways unique in literature.

B. views on immorality are given in the poem his sonnet published in Athenaeum Jan

NOT ON SANDS, STYGIAN SHORE, nor in clear stream dead whose shades we have been, nor shall we meet those shades whom we have held as foes; no meadow of asphodel our bed, shall bread, nor shall we work each other in the face to love or hate each other being dead.

If open some farce or facing some disguise, we shall not argue saying "Pursuits" or "Thous", our arguments whole drift we shall forget, who's right, who's wrong, will be all one to us; we shall not even know that we have met.
But meet we shall & part, and meet again where dead men meet, on lips of living men.

Chauvin. In La Cocarde Tricolore, Epilogue de la Guerre D'alger par M. M. Theodore de Kappeler Cogniard. Represented in the first time in Paris 19th March 1831

La Cocarde, vieux Soldat, Chauvin, jeune com-script. Scene in Algiers

The old soldier rescue Chauvin & a friend and then breeds out at France of the French spirit. "Ils étaient mis aux deux, c'est pas France c'est pas Français" The old soldier had saw all the army loved him and called him La Cocarde. In the Egyptian campaign "le petit" had spoken to him after a battle and saying that he had lost his Cocarde had given him his & thus he had carried ever since kept his heart. "Elle restera là sur ce cœur qui battra toujours au nom de Napoléon". At the instigation of a serpent he was arrested for fomenting discord. & just as the tribunal called the Arabs made an attack. La Cocarde was captured & found his son an old prisoner.
They escape. The Arabs are defeated & the Cocarde is subsequently tried and condemned to death. Chauvin plays a minor part in this but befriends & absconds the old soldier at his condemnation. He is furious but not where so far as I can see are sentiments which we would call chauvinistic but in truth. As the sentence of execution was about to be carried out and alarm is heard when Cocarde son rushes in with the tricolor & announces that liberty has returned, a patriotic song follows & at the end La Cocarde sings Tous les nations étrangères Contre nous en vain s'unissent, Avant de franchir nos frontières, Tous les corps d'élus marcheront

His life synchronized with the influx of the Latin version of the Arabic commentaries & translators of Aristotle, and also with the facilities opened by the Crusades for the acquisition of Greek mss. "He cleared forth as the first & in some respects as the greatest of the encyclopaedia thinkers of the 13th century."

He was the teacher of Roger Bacon, the great Franciscan scholar

One of his letters - example. - to Adam Marsh
"I know that the perils of an exalted station are neither few nor inconsiderable. I know its pitifulness, how hard it is to repress pride, how rare is the cure of one's own weakness, how easy it is to feel contempt for others, how difficult to adapt oneself to the needs of the weaker brethren: it is the shadow of power, and the reality of servitude. I know also from experience, and still suffer from the knowledge, how many thorns there are in riches, how many occasions they afford for acting wrongly, how often they are misused, how true it is that they impoverish instead of enriching their possessors, and how these same possessors, who are really themselves owned by the wealth which they are the reputed owners, find their intellects blinded and rendered torpid and dormant"

It may be doubted whether a man even allows complete dominion over the flesh. We can say yes so far as the will is concerned: but the ^{poor} soul sometimes stumbles, nor sleeps and many a saintly man goes off to sleep, not to be wakened so soon, & as he does, perhaps, for structural & organic reasons, sleep with the daughter of death.

divers authors, especially that of Sir Kenelm Digby in his Discourse of Bodies & Lond. 1651 Poor - Some one called J. Cook? (writing is old) has written comments - thro A - "more gibberish" hypothetical Rank" Evidently he was a credulous old chap.

At p 53 he gives the old story of the artificial generation of plants - in which they are recalled to life and start up stalk and leaf, which but now was dust or lignum. One Experiment "casually" made tho. was made by a learned grave Physician nearly related to me" Having in the evening exposed a decoction for a child (made of Violet leaves, Strawberry leaves, Mallows & the like) to the cold of the night. The next morning he found it covered with a slender crust of Ice, which gave him leave thro A to behold in the water the leaves in their perfect shapes of all these plants of which the decoction was made, both in fashion and colour, which remained in that posture till the Ice was broken. which was no sooner done than but all these fictitious plants presently vanished, nothing remaining but the clean lignum of the decoction"

Says of ^{Digby} Harvey, an observer. whom was quoted by Sir K. Digby "I confesse his curious eye seldom takes anything upon trust, or slightly passes by what is observable"

Dr J Cook is eminent at the end is correct. "not

The Heræon lies somewhat nearer to Mycenæ than to Argos, and was once connected with the city of Agamemnon by a "sacred way." At present it is best approached from Argos, and the distance from that town—some six or seven miles—has an interest of its own for the classical scholar, who can hardly fail to remember the touching story related by Cræsus, as Herodotus tells us, to Cyrus when on the point of being burnt on the pyre by his triumphant conqueror. At Argos lived Kydippe, the priestess of Hera, who, on the day of the goddess's festival, was bound to be present at the temple in order to conduct the sacred rites. The throng of worshippers had already assembled, and the hour for the sacrifice approached; but the oxen, which were to draw the chariot of the priestess to the temple, could not be found in the fields. Then Kleobis and Biton, her two athletic sons, attached themselves to the yoke, and drew their mother to the sanctuary. As they approached the multitude wondered and congratulated the priestess on the strength, the beauty, and the devotion of her sons; and the proud and happy mother prayed the goddess to grant them the best of all the blessings that the gods bestow on men. The youths joined in the sacrifice and feasted, and laid down to rest in the temple—never to rise again, for the goddess had heard their mother's prayer, and had bestowed on them the best of all blessings—that is, death.

most important—duty of every Korean housewife. In Korea, as in China, ancestor worship is the real religion. Confucianism is the avowed religion of the country ; but, like the Chinese, the Koreans hold dogmatic religions in considerable, good-natured contempt.

Fortune-tellers and astrologers are as many and as prosperous in Korea as in China. Like the Japanese, the Koreans have found a special and profitable vocation for their blind. In Japan the needy blind invariably practice shampooing. In Korea the blind exorcise devils and in analogous ways make themselves generally useful. Their dealings with the evil spirits are summary and thorough. The gifted blind man frightens the devil to death by means of diabolical noises, or catches the devil in a bottle and carries it in triumph to a place of safety where devils cease from troubling and afflicted Koreans are at rest.

The laws of Korea are explicit concerning high treason. They smite it hip and thigh. They exterminate it root and branch. If a Korean is found guilty of high treason, he dies, and his entire family dies with him. In this custom the Koreans are again Chinese and not altogether un-Japanese. No Korean dare utter his King's name. When the King dies he is given a name (a kind of name, an apology for a name) by which his august personality may be distinguished amid the dense masses of history. But his real name, the name he bears in life, is never spoken save in the secrecy of the palace harem. And

Tutors Club. In Oct. 1905 a few months after coming to Oxford I was asked to, via this club which was started about 1820. The first meeting was at Cradham and Wells the secretary before dinner announced to the members that he had an interesting announcement to make. He had received that morning from Dr Bright the master of Univ. a note stating that in clearing out the library before leaving Univ. college he had come upon a mss. book belonging to the club which had been mislaid by Bradley his predecessor in the Mastership & thus Wells said was the long lost book in which all the members of the club had entered their names. It had been lost, much to their grief for 25-years. The first name in the book was Each man had entered a sort of biography. Among the notable men were both the Arnolds, Jovett, Tait and others. & Addison Smith, Rait & Robinson Ellis were the only men whose names were in the book among existing members. When I read the men were. Raper, Ellis, Goudy, Dacey, Owen Phepps, Anson

In the winter of 05-06 we had six dinners Nov 6. 06 1st dinner of club at Robinson Ellis at Trinity - delightful evening. 1st next Dacey who was full of stories. Told one of Walsely. a student had come to him with an essay on some aspect 3rd in 1770 & another in 1823 at Oxford (cost £2000).

In 1698. "A journey to Paris". Dr Martin Lister narrated it in "A journey to London in the year 1698" Lister J. to Paris went thru several editions. (3rd & 4th) In 1700 he edited the de Statica medicina of Sanderson from the original issued in 1614. An English translation by John Linnay ran thru 5 editions In 1705 edited the de Opsoniis et Condimentis.
The original issued at Milan in 1490. It was a sort of cook book. Dr Linnay reworked it in a small table list of Cookery &c in translation of Horace of Poetry. Excellent - a clever hit. - letters &c.
He became phys to the Queen (Anne), & in 1709 he pub. his last work de Humoribus.
✓ In 1829 Dr Geo. Henning reprinted the J. to Paris.
I bought his translation of G. Bodartius on Insects at Kew on Sept. 1st. for 5s and gave it to Dr Auden of York.
It seems a very rare work. beautiful plates. only 150 were printed. I got another copy in Aug. 1906 - also the Historia ✓ animalium, the journey to Paris, Linnay's select. a french edition?
The journey to Paris appeared a few years ago. (I have)

March 14. 1809 went to the Sant' Agostino ^{Rome} and seen the 'Madonna del Parto' the famous Madonna which helps the pregnant women. It is a large gaudily bedecked figure - like a fashionably dressed Queen with a crown on her head & an infant in her arms, the figure & the whole wall of the end of the church are covered with votive offerings - pictures dealing with circumstances in which the Madonna had been helped - a man falling off a broken ladder who had time to pray & beg & so, well as, was not hurt - - shops - pictures of raised byland & half dead girls, models of cups, hands feet, chiefly in metal - of gaudy gilt or silvered - crutches in the ends of the church, braces, crutches & c. & c. & the chains so in the greatest profusion, two pregnant women were praying before her & several men & boys. The toes of the left foot are worn away by the kisses of the faithful and are now coated with silver.

In the same church over the high altar is the picture painted by St. Luke & in a chapel to the left is the tomb of St. Monica.
